Happy Holidays!

Animal massage hits prime time! Yes, that's right. David Letterman is going to be sharing the world of animal massage with his audience this week. Be sure to tune in tomorrow night, Wednesday, December 9th, when he'll be interviewing Maryjean Ballner, one of our own Expert Advisors. I'm so excited to see the show! What a wonderful opportunity for all of us already involved in any way, and especially for the many more animals who will benefit in the future.

The other reason I'm personally grateful for this news, is that it's gotten me focused to finally get this newsletter out, though in a slightly abbreviated format for this month. (Is anyone else feeling a little overwhelmed this holiday season?) I'd also like to announce my own interview opportunity on StarStyle Radio this Thursday December 10th at 3:15 pm, PST. You can listen here to a live broadcast, or listen to a recording from the Starstyle website later. (Just click on the "Radio Shows" tab from their homepage to find the archived shows.)

For this shortened holiday version of the newsletter, I'll just offer a few more resources for you below. Then in 2010 we'll be back with Animal Wellness Tips from our Experts (including a new Expert, stay tuned!), and a featured Guest Expert each month. But I can't send this newsletter without an inspirational Photo and Quote of the month. And for the December Special, I'll extend the holiday offer begun in November. (The new e-books listed there will be ready well before Christmas, should be by December 15th.)

A few resources for animal wellness:

- Debranne Patillo, one of our Expert Advisors and founder of Equinology and Caninology, offers through her school a free on-line course in equine anatomy. Just check it out, and note the parts about the YouTube video available, and the instructions for getting registered and getting a certificate of completion.
- Fences for Fido is a wonderful non-profit, volunteer effort dedicated to improving the welfare of dogs living outdoors by removing chains, building fences, providing shelter, and offering free spay/neuter services.
- NaturallyComplementary.com is a great site that's just come to my attention. I need to explore it more myself, but so far I can especially recommend their free e-book, Animal Complementary Alternative Medicines \(CAMs\): Therapies and Remedies for Pets.
- A couple more YouTube videos to watch. One on Dog Massage: Loosening the Legs from my book, The Dog Lover's Guide to Massage, and another from Maryjean, So Your Cat Wants a Massage? (You may also find one from me on Rocking (for dogs), though the audio and visual are out of sync for now. I'll announce it officially once that's fixed. Meanwhile, you can watch it "as is" if you like, with my apologies.)

I'm using this one to console myself. The best time to send a December newsletter is December 1st. The second best time is before January! Merry Christmas, Happy Holidays, and Happy New Year!
